Learning focus

Legislative relations are structured mainly by the Union, State and Concurrent Lists in the Seventh Schedule, alongside other constitutional provisions.

1. Administrative relations include coordination and specified Union directions. Disputes may arise over implementation, governors, investigations or shared responsibilities.

2. Financial relations concern taxation powers, revenue sharing, grants and recommendations of the Finance Commission. Fiscal capacity affects the real autonomy of states.

3. Intergovernmental bodies and meetings can facilitate consultation, while courts may resolve constitutional disputes within their jurisdiction.

4. Healthy Union–State relations require transparent consultation, predictable fiscal arrangements and respect for elected governments and constitutional limits.
